A Letter

In 1766 Andrew Stillington was living in what is now Fauquier County. He married Elizabeth Warwick, and was the step-father of Major Jacob Warwick. He was probably living at the place where Marlinton is located at the time this letter was written. It was written to John Stillington, in Ireland, and he afterwards came here and is the ancestor of the Stillington family. Andrew Stillington though twice married left no descendants.

Green Spring, September 13th, 1766

Dear Brother:

This comes to let you know that I am in good health & present bless'd be God for it hoping these will find you and your family in the same condition; for tho' we have been long absent from each other, yet neither time nor distance of place can remove the brotherly affection I have for you. As for my situation in this Countyt, I live on a branch of the Mississippi Waters, which is very fertile land but is not yet purchased from the Indians. I enjoy a reasonable living but have been long in a dangerous situation from the incursions of the savages; yet though the protection of God have hitherto excepte, and had I the Comfort of you to converse with should think myself happy.

But I dare not advise to come to this country. Yet were I in Ireland and had such a family as you have and could free it in no other way, I would bind myself and then before I would stay to be so oppress'd, but you have no occasion, for if you are unable to pay your passage, come upon redemption to Pennsylvania and Brother William will soon release you, and as soon as I have opportunity I will repay it him.

I had the comfort of hearing of your welfare by Brother Jillion which gave me great satisfaction, and likewise I heard of Brother Thomas.

I have no child which makes me more desirous to have you rear. My wife joins in our love to you and family and Sister Elizabeth and her family and to all old friends, which is all from your affectionate and loving brother till Death.

Andrew Stillington.
